Copperhead Cajolery

In the state of Pennsylvania, where the Democratic party is now in the ascendant, it has held the Democratic State Convention and has put the Democratic State ticket in the field. Almost every State in the Union is now engaged in the same work. Everywhere the Democracy is the party of the Copperhead, and everywhere they are trying to cajole the people into voting for them by prudently asking for the votes of the brave men who, in spite of all the Copperhead politicians and newspapers are trying to do, have crushed the rebellion with their own strong arms, while the Democracy, with a few honorable exceptions, have been the apologists, the allies, the sympathizers, and the aiders and abettors of the rebellion. Now, when the rebellion is crushed, when the Democracy, as a party, is utterly powerless to do any more harm, they are trying to get back into power by the same means that they used to get into power before the rebellion—by cajoling the people. They are trying to cajole the soldiers by telling them that they were not responsible for the rebellion, that they were deceived by their leaders, and that they were forced into the army against their will. They are trying to cajole the negroes by telling them that they are their friends, and that they will secure to them their rights. They are trying to cajole the Union men by telling them that they are Union men, and that they have always been Union men, and that they have always been opposed to the rebellion. They are trying to cajole the Democrats by telling them that they are Democrats, and that they have always been Democrats, and that they have always been opposed to the rebellion. They are trying to cajole the Copperheads by telling them that they are Copperheads, and that they have always been Copperheads, and that they have always been opposed to the rebellion. They are trying to cajole the people by telling them that they have always been opposed to the rebellion, and that they have always been opposed to the rebellion, and that they have always been opposed to the rebellion, and

Champ Ferguson

THE CHIEFTAIN OF THE KILLED. THRILLING NARRATIVE

The Editor of the Nashville Union and American publishes an interview with Champ Ferguson in which he makes the following statement:

I NEVER SHOT UNARMED MEN.

We worked along until Saturday evening, when we got to Hiram Evans'. Here we halted, and I went to the house and asked for something to eat. They said they would get me something, and I went in and sat down. While I was sitting there I heard some one say, "Champ Ferguson is in the house." I looked around and saw Evans and Bill Jones. I knew they were only joking or trying to scare me, and I asked them what they were doing. They said they were not joking, and that they were going to take me prisoner. I told them that they could not do it. They said they could, and that they were going to do it. I told them that I would not be taken prisoner, and that I would die first. They said they would kill me if I resisted. I told them that I would resist, and that they could not kill me. They said they could, and that they would. I told them that I would not be killed. They said they would kill me. I told them that I would not be killed. They said they would kill me. I told them that I would not be killed. They said they would kill me
